The Governor's duties.

If idlers, licences &c, as public censors, to show up abuses, but rarely do we assume the unenviable task of dictating to public officials the path they should follow. This would suppose us more capable of holding the reins of power that the authorities, thenuse vos, whom we obey. Yet as Alexander was accustomed to hear the advice of his meanest soldiers, it will not be misplaced for us to offer some suggestions to the new Governor. Our counsel may be the more acceptable, since we are admittedly friends to the country and partisans only of its progress and development.

There are many who imagine that this province is befriended by the severance of the city, and that D. Mariano Saavedra, as Governor of the camp, holds as empty dignity as if he were viceroy of Terra del Fuego. This may be true in a political sense; but, as far as industry, wealth, resources, and immigration are concerned, the extra-mural Government is the most important in the Republic. What would Buenos Ayres be, without its sheep-farms? With less than half its present exports, with a bare camp tenanted only by roving gauchos, with land worth about as much as the Lama in the Hoja, with Indian marauders besieging the Azul or Pergamino, we should see the streets of the capital grassgrown, shops closed, and empty houses numerous. The newspapers might treat us to splendid essays on politics, and preen irrefragably that municipalism is dangerous and wool a mere prejudice. But in point of fact we should retrograde 100 years, and find at last that, if the province loses in dignity by the alienation of the city, it won't fall into primitive barbarism by being deprived of its sheep.

Seeing then that the woolly quadruped, so emblematic of peaceful retirement, is the mighty agent which raises those splendid structures, freights our shipping, furnishes our saloons, prints our papers and, in fine, develops our industry of every kind, we claim not merely especial, but exclusive care for this pillar of provincial and national greatness.

We will endeavour to draw closer the relations between our rural countrymen and their Governor, by touching the former to have confidence in so paciffic a ruler, and inviting the latter to regard sheep-farmers as dear as the apple of his eye.

The camp-justices are for the most part badly selected, and this is the root of all the abuses. Justice is not punished, and estancieros have the rare privilege of buying and paying taxes on, land, that the cattle of the partido may cause as little a constant nuisance. The "free lances" of mediæval days were less troublesome than are the vagabonds who live at large in the camp. These parasites who resemble the air-plant of Buenos Ayres, living on visible appearance, except hanging about, should be made work or else guard the frontier. Much of the antipathy between Irishmen and natives would disappear, if all lived on their own labour. Life and property are generally safe, but when a case of outrage occurs, the authorities should have both the means and responsibility to arrest the offenders.

We have heard of cases where the Juez or Prefect, being allow- ed a certain sum for police, saved the Plaza without forcing the a portion by lessening his force, marked by the hammer.

while also diminishing the means. We call particular attention of overtaking culprits this way to the subscriptions collected at Lobos should be strictly punished. All cases of the kind should be severely punished. It is useless to remark that any sufferer in Lamcheire and Inglaterra, who thinks it a venial fault to kill a foreigner, should hear of very English-man and Irish-man taught morality, in Bahia Blanca, Azul, Tandil, at home or abroad, for humanity's sake.

Again, municipal juries should be summoned to meet the Juez in discharging justice with an even hand; and the "estate" or "estancia" should never be made a pretext to waste the time of our industrious countrymen who may have cause to invoke the arm of the law.

After purifying the Juzgados and strengthening the corrective power, our Governor would do well to imitate Ancient Rome, by making his primary task the improvement of the highways. It is folly to talk of intersecting our camp with railroads, while many arroyos are impassable to ordinary traffic and impose a tax on human life. Great sums have been expended to throw bridges over the rivers of Luxan, Pilar and Arrecifes, but there are still many arroyos of no small size. The Juez de Giles sometimes obliges all the passengers to descend from the diligence, and cross, by stepping-stones, the impetuous flood. This is only one of several such cases. In Pila lately a thousand sheep were driven, from having been built in a wrong situation, for, emerging from the bunshwood beyond the stream, we find ourself set of Perote, journeying in a would-be quagmire. It would be also to remove the bridge altogether, or else make a causeway across the marsh. Apropos, there are scores of these nuisnes on the public roads, which make the traveller curse the day he left the camp?—a dangerous practice with those who are not rapaunas.

Improved facilities of transit are vitally necessary: not less so as national education. Much so- ciety may grow in the wool declare that the gauchos are only a medium between Christians and Indians. Their early life is too much devoted to nomadic habits and playing at billiards, to afford any opportunity of imbuing their minds the principles of religion or social restraint. An eminent patriot [Rivadavia] confessed that the revolution had sadly corrupted public morals, and we should now add that the introduction of Christianity thus simply taking off their hats before the church-door, or erecting a cross where they have murdered a fellow-creature. At present their whole religion may be said to consist in those two devout practices, the only relic of former piety. It is notorious that the churches are filled on Sundays with Irishmen, while natives flock to the billiard tables. The only exception must be made in the "Escuelas del Estado."

The chapter of duties for our new Governor is not merely confined to the open camp: if we have first mentioned the claims of the rural population, it is because these are more urgent. On another day we will speak of the camp towns, what they are, and what they ought to be, hoping our present discourse will sink deeply into the memory of all those who care for the advancement of this noble province.

Editor's Table.

The revolution in Montevideo seems to have been a sham, as we find no confirmation of the matter in the Oriental papers. We rather think the affair in Paraguay is of a similar character —got up, probably, to create an effect on the Bolsa.

Auctions are much in vogue now. Anything of importance, from a Durham bull to a Mr. Buchanan's incubrations, cannot be disposed of, except by the auctioneer's hammer. Even our importers have got the fever, and trade sales are beginning to be the favorite mode of selling wholesale. If come stop is not put to this auction fever, we cannot say where people will stop. We have been told that large wool auctions are to take place this season, and we hardly credit it. Buenos Ayres, we are afraid, will be nearly exhausted for a time. The man who will stand by a friend in the hour of need, or risks his life to accommodate a fellow-traveller and passengers, in the outer roads, crosses a pluck which is proverbial with our countrymen, and we find a difficulty in saying which we admire most, the indomitable courage of our friend Mr. Geo Keen, in offering to put off in a small boat, with the risirk for the «Neptune,» or the admirable disinterestedness and the most exalted proof that this country can give to the European capitalists of the sincerity of the Rulers in their present Peroration in a would-be quagmire. It would be also to remove the bridge altogether, or else make a causeway across the marsh. gained immense possessions throughout that province. They erected a grand Cathedral, ten large churches, and several spacious Convents for themselves, for Dominican, and Franciscan friars and nuns, as well as a College for Clerical instruction; they were all richly endowed, but subsequently sunk into poverty during the civil wars.

The University is a spacious building, under the direction of several professors, of liberal ideas, tolerant principles, and patronized out of nihilities. Many of the youths of the La Province are educated at this university, which is highly celebrated for the learned men, not only of the Confederation, but also of Bolivia and Peru, who have issued from its portals. It is worthy of remark, that at the breaking out of the revolution, for an extent of 3000 miles, including cities and villages of Peru, Chile and the River Plata, there was but one solitary printing-press, and that formerly belonged to the Jesuits of Cordova. The climate of Cordova is agreeable, and the general state of the atmosphere dry. It is occasionally subject to a very low degree of temperature. The market is supplied with an abundance of provisions, and living is very reasonable.

This province is enriched with a magnificent mountain, wooded valleys, delightful plains, and limpid streams. There is a peculiar interest on ascending the mountains, which commences a few miles from the town; you meet with a continual variation of scenery, on gradually approaching the beautiful plains, and in a few hours' walk, from the glorious heat of summer to the dreary cold of winter. It has been truly remarked, that the province of Cordova possesses a climate of every temperature; that it is the habitat of Norway or Italy may travel over it, with his barometer in his hand, in search of a climate like his own, which he is sure to find in every respect suited to his constitution and habits.

Indian corn, wheat, barley, beans and cotton, all come to perfection in different districts. Cattle, horses, sheep, goats, mules and guanacos roam over luxuriant pastures. The mule is very coveted to sheep, where wool is highly esteemed in Europe.

There is a great variety of trees, many of which are of an extraordinary height, and support some of which were cultivated by the Jesuits, presenting the appearance of a small plantation. The timber of many of the trees is equal to that of Paraguay, and is employed by the inhabitants of the province for building, and for different articles of furniture.

There are gold, silver, copper and iron mines; the copper mines are abundant, and of superior quality. There are also quarries of slate and marble, of a beautiful appearance, and of different colours. Birds of various kinds, with beautiful plumage, enchant the traveller with their joyous song, while innumerable insects, many of which are unknown to the European, add to the pleasure of his journey. Flowers of every description, and of the most delicate perfume, with which the earth with their delightful fragrance. There are few species of trees which nature has bestowed on which nature has bestowed which are not found in this province, the vegetable and mineral kingdoms, as the province of Cordova.

The Grand Prior of Ireland

(Concluded.)

PROVINCIAL MINISTRY. Dr. Jose Antonio Acosta has been appointed Minister of Government of the province.

The "Filibuma" hails his appointment as a triumph to their anti-capitalization party: we think they must be mistaken, the most signal defeat of that party is in the last election was the appointment of this same Dr Acosta who voted against them.

CURIOUS EFFIGIES. The party who attacked the last diligence for the interior, consisted of seven Indians, two boys and a woman. They were in ambush over 24 hours and let a diligence for Cordova pass unmolested because it had many passengers.

When the coach with Sr R. jo and another passenger passed they took it and the prisoners, and proceeded to rack leisurely the contents of the diligence.

One of the ponies then asked for a small present and the Indians taking a little heap of Bolivians coin, separated it into as many small heaps as there were prisoners and made them each a present.

The share of Sr Rojo in this present amounted to 14 dollars.

GOOD MEASURE.—We are happy to applaud the course of the new Governor who is showing his practical sense of very necessary reforms

We perceive that he has made important reductions in the number of public employees which was very excessive for our requirements.

If he continues in this manner and the National Government follow his example we need not be afraid of future deficits.

At the places nothing has been done on account of the weather, yet arrivals have been large especially in dry hides, tuferi or qualities and sealskins Also a few cents with wool of the, new clip from San Antonio de Areco and Villa Mercedes

At the Italian business is rather dull and we hear of the following sales

Dry hides. 5000 classified for the states but bound as Mfor Spain at 39 ys.

Wool from deposit old clip, 500 arrobas months at 8 2/3.

Frégate. Swedish schooner Charlotte, to load salt in Patagones for this port at 5 shils lumps.

The ounces gauna seems to progress. Down one day and up another. On Tuesday every one had it that ounces were golden was to 358 right off, whilst yesterday the wind changed, and every one was looking up. If this speculation were confined to railway shares, it would be less injurious to us all; but as it is, when people falls, every imported article tumbles with it and in like manner, when gold goes up, sugar goes with it; and so on, to the end of the chapter.

In exchange, from 96½ to 96,000, has been sold on England, and taken at 48d. We understand that there is no scarcity of drawers; but good bills will not go much over 6d for this packet.

A small lot of the new wool came into the South Plaza yesterday morning, from the Villa Mercedes. Going, however, to the state of the weather, nothing has been done with it yet; it is in very good condition, but by no means equal to other wools in the same quarter.

If the weather brightens a little we may expects several thousand arrobas next week from the Azul; in the South the calamities have not as yet begun smarting.

We regret to say our country friends, that wool has so well, and we have no doubt that the present prices will be sustained, We give the following quotations, for the benefit of our country subscribers, who may consult with security on the "Standard," for the fullest and most reliable information on wool matters

VARIETES.

—On écrit de Naples que un duel à mort vient d'avoir lieu entre deux jeunes nobles Marin et Manrin Grenade. Les deux rivales, car la jalousie a été la cause de la querelle, avaient choisis Parme naturelle, le couteau. Dans des deux armes est arrêté sur la place frappés à mort; Pauline vit encore, mais elle a reçu dix-huit blessures.

—Il est arrivé depuis peu à Paris une femme dite sauvage, qu'on présente en ce moment à tous les corps savans de la capitale. Cette femme rendrait bien des points à la célèbre reine Isabelle et a son siégeon dont on a fait une consolation: la chevelure de la sauvagesse en question mesure 1 mètre 50 centimètres de long gueur, et comme elle est crépue, laineuse et feutrée en quelque sorte, quand cette chevelure est épandue, on dirait un manteau, elle donne à celle-ci des proportions monstrueuses.

—On écrit de Copenhague (Danemark): Depuis longtemps aucun artiste n'a inspiré autant de sensation en Danemark que le tenor actuel du Popéra royal, M. Nyrup. Son portait se trouve à l'étalage de tous les marchands de gravures, on a même inventé des médailles à son effigie. Nos meilleurs poètes, entre autres le célèbre Andersen, lui ont adressé des vers, et le comte de Danner, l'homme mangeur-type du roi Pinvite à chanter dans sa cour. «Nyrup, fils d'un pêcheur de la province de Seeland, arriva à Copenhague vers la fin de 1860. Entraîné par son goût pour la musique, il apprit de lui-même le boulets, et manie cet instrument avec tant d'habileté qu'en peu de quelques mois Nyrup fut admis dans un orchestre.

(Suite.)

Ces êtres apparaissent à cette classe laborieuse composée de gens grossiers pervertis et de gens intelligents déclassés, que cet entre la classe dite moyenne et la classe inférieure, et qui combine quelques uns des éléments de la première avec quelques uns des éléments de la dernière. Ils apparaissent dans les rixes de la première, sans avoir l'honnêteté ferme du ouvrier et l'ordre honnête du bourgeois.

Cependant de ces natures naines qui, quelque fois sombres les chaufte par hasard diplômant facilement monstrueuses. Il y avait dans la femme le fond d'un bonze et dans l'homme l'étoffe d'un gueux. Tous deux, ennemis au plus haut degré de civilisés du progrès de l'idéal au progrès qui fait dans le sens du mal. Il existe des âmes dérivesses tendant continuellement vers les ténèbres, retrogradant dans la nuit plutôt qu'elles ny avancent, empêchant par leur présence à augmenter leur ultimum, empirant sans cesse et remperpirant de plus en plus d'une manière sinistre. Cet homme et cette femme étaient de ces natures là.

Le Thénardier particulièrement était gênant pour le phylosonnaire. On ne sait regarder certains hommes pour sens de front ou les sent ténébreux à demi dans et ténèbres. Ils sont inquiets devinés en et mécontents devant eux. Ils n'en ont pas connaissance. On ne peut pas plus reprocher de ces quils ont fait que de ce qu'ils tenait l'ombre qu'ils ont dans le regard les ténèbres. Rien qu'en les entendant dire ce mot on quon les voyant faire un geste, on entrevoit de sombres secrets dans leur passé et de sombres mystères dans leur avenir.

Ce Thénardier, où allait-il bon en ce moment? Il allait probablement la campagne de Waterloo et avait un mauvais numéro dans sa poche. Il était mécontent de son sort, de son état, de son époque, de tout ce qui pesait sur lui, de tout ce qui était. Il consigna de son cabaret dont nous allons en faire de nos tous dans un instant. Il avait pointé les moins un il ne voulait faire un pas de moins; mal Quinze Français se trouvaient dans cette auberge, qui après avoir été d'abord la plus vulgaire, tombe de seconde bouchelle de Rembey à madame Bonnon. Madame et de madame de Lafayette à madame Batthelemy Hausy, tuendant la rue almande des patriotes du Pont et rue agent moins un pour la banlieue. Madame Thénardier était juste assez bien-apparente pour lui ces espèces de livres Elle semblait un. Elle y mettait quelle était de cervelle cela lui avait donné, tout qu'elle avait été très jeune, et même un peu plus tard, une sorte d'attitude pendant près de son mari, empêchait d'une certaine profondeur, raillait légèrement la grammaire parlait grossièrement fin en même temps, mais, en fait du sentimentalisme, lisait Pigault-Lebrun, et pour "quoi ce qui touche le cœur," comme il disait dans son jargon, lisait entre et sans mélange. Sa femme avait, quelques douzes ou quinze ans de moins que lui. Plus tard, quand les choses nous remarquèrent plusieurs femmes, écrent à grossisme, quand la Méjean se dégagea de la Pauvin, la Thénardier ne fut plus qu'une grosse méchante femme, ayant savoure des femmes hôtes. Or où ne fit pas impunément des méchancetés. Il en sortit que sa fille aînée se nomma Epanine, avant à la coiffe la pauvre petite fille et se nommer Gabmer elle était à je ne sais quelle horrible divination faite par un roman de Ducray-Duménil, de ne supposer qu'Azelma.

Au reste, pour le dire en passant, tous ces noms étaient pris dans ce roman. Le père Thénardier ne voulait pas être dupe de rien. Il avait lu Atala et René, et prétendait appeler Pamela sa fille aînée, ce qui permet appeler Pamela quand une bonbonnière avec autre qu'un roman de Ducray-Duménil. Il y a bien plus: il prétendait que les noms propres ne sont pas faits pour être portés, et que, quand on a lu un nom dans un livre, on ne peut plus le donner à son enfant. Il disait que les noms propres sont comme les habits de bal, qui ont servi une fois, et qui ne peuvent plus servir. Il était fier de la Révolution française.

III

Waterloo.

Il ne sortit pas de cette auberge pour poursuivre sa route.

Grâce aux événements survenus dans ses voyageurs, Thénardier put rester où il voulait et fixer son séjour à Montfermeil. Il avait besoin de la solitude pour ses manœuvres et pour ses ténèbres. Il y avait besoin de la banque pour à finir ce qu'il appelait ses affaires de commerce, et Montfermeil était pour une grande part dans ses projets. Que cette espèce de cabaret-bouge-auberge-gargote-relais fût à la fois, ce qui est rare, achalandé et clandestin, c'était ce qu'il lui fallait. Thénardier avait à côté de lui, pour ainsi dire, tout le monde et personne. Il était connu et inconnu. Il était à portée de tout et ne se mêlait à rien. Il était dans la meilleure position du monde pour une personne qui veut être vue et qui veut être vue et qui veut être bien. Il était dans la meilleure position du monde pour une personne
